

Testing User Stories

Visitor Goals:

1. As a user, I want to easily understand the main purpose of this site, so that I can be sure if this is the right site for me

Upon landing on the homepage the user is greeted with a hero image with a title clearly stating the name of the juice bar and the type of the things the juice bar has to offer.

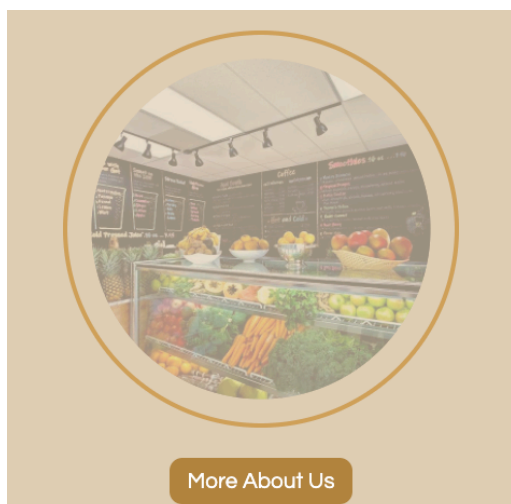

2. As a user, I want to be able to navigate the website, so that I can easily navigate across the website and browse all the pages.

The user can use the clearly labelled navigation bar at the top of the page to access all of the main pages of the website.

There is also links all through the webpage that guide you through the website

On the homepage there is a link to the about page within the about page through the image in the centre of the “who we are” section of the homepage.

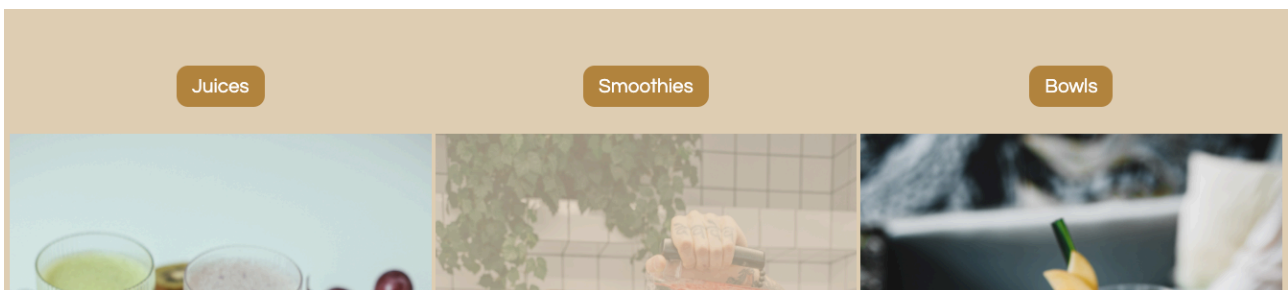

As this is not a completely clear navigation I have also added a button that links you to the About Us page underneath for clarity.

Similarly, with the three images showing juices, smoothies and fruit bowls I have added links to those sections of the menu, this is indicated by a interactive haze covering the image. I did want to add a button indicating that this links to the juice or smoothie or bowl part menu over the image although I didn't find the resources to help me do this. I would like to do this in the future.

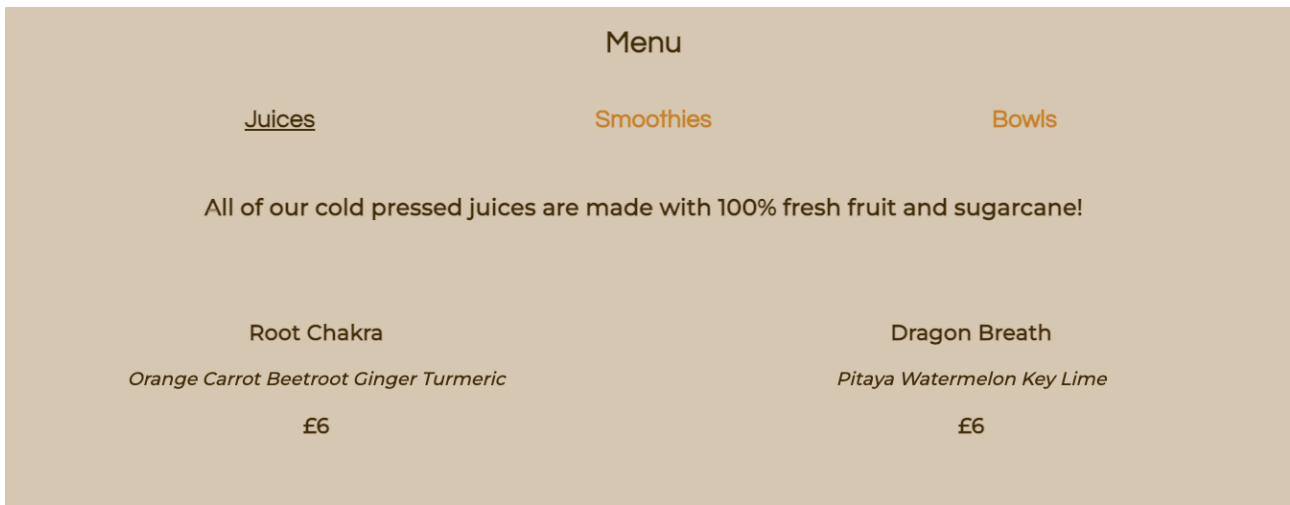

Instead I have added buttons above the images to assist the user in more clear navigation.

In the footer there is a back to top link which navigates the user to the top of their current webpage.

The menu page has been divided into three separate html pages to avoid cluttering the page, these menu pages can be easily navigated through the links in with the relevant headers. These links are interactive, changing font colour when they're hovered over and staying that colour with an underline when they are active.

3. As a user, I want to be able to visit the social media pages for this juice bar, so that can see the latest social media news shared.

The footer includes links to social media accounts which are displayed with the famous icons.
